

Welcome to Maildistiller.

We are the industry leaders in email filtering managed services.

Maildistiller is an award winning, industry leading provider of solutions to overcome malicious and time wasting content within email. It improves employee productivity and reduces mail storage costs.

This is delivered as a managed service – installed quickly and serviced by us with no impact on your IT costs or equipment. Maildistillers technology was created and spun out from telecoms and internet giant BT in 2002.

Maildistiller integrates across a broad range of standard mail platforms. When implemented it will also increase the effectiveness of your own security products through a lower malicious email profile both leaving and entering the company.

We recognise that Customer Care is paramount to both our partners and end users. We strive to deliver the best service in the industry using named customer account managers and UK and Ireland based contact centres.

Maildistiller prides itself on its advanced Research and Technical Centre. The company is on a constant drive not only to keep the current version of its software ahead of the rest but also to drive the future of the industry. The company will be launching a range of add on services in the coming months and in addition Maildistiller is developing a new genre for messaging security which we will announce soon.

The Maildistiller leadership and investment team is comprised of experienced, successful board members proven in technical and business environments. The company has its headquarters in the Titanic Quarter of Belfast and has data centres, representatives and customers throughout the UK and Ireland.

Our client base spreads globally throughout the public and private sector including healthcare, government bodies and organisations with as few as two inboxes to tens of thousands.

Maldistiller is at the forefront in the global provision
of email filtering
managed services.

We strive tirelessly to provide our users with the ultimate in email protection and to ensure that our service is incorporated into your working life with the greatest of ease.

